

I'm Matt, Design Engineer from the UK.
But i live Bulgaria.

I've been designing & developing websites for more than 20 years.
But i've done it professionally since 2008

I play football & support my home team LFC.
Additionally i like Snowboarding, hiking and camping.

Recently i built something.
Because i was made redundant.

It's called nextjobs.dev - I made it during September '03 as a side project after losing my previous job. I wanted to make a full-stack web application that could both showcase my design and development ability while learning some more. It uses my current flavour mentioned above and utilises a bunch of Next 13's awesome new features like edge functions together with Prisma's new Accelerate product.

While i'm searching for a job i'd be happy to give employers a tour of the repo!

My experience.

Who i've worked for.

I've worked with a variety of incredible clients and brands during my career, each one presenting new and exciting challenges. I have worked both individually and as a team while maintaining an agile and strategic process both for development and creative work.
